This system works at or just above engine idle (see diagram). Only a very small amount of vacuum can be created by the engine when it is at idle speed. The pilot system is placed nearest the intake manifold (where there is the most suction) because of the limited velocity of air (vacuum) moving through the carb at idle speed.

Ensure the engine is warm, leave it running, and put about 20 quarters into the quarter car wash machine. Spray the engine down with soapy water, then switch over to the degreaser, if it's available, then switch back to the soapy water. You can get one inch away from everything to get it really clean. Sometimes you'll flake off loose paint.
